

Justice Courts are often called “the courts closest to the people” because they have very broad jurisdiction over matters affecting the everyday lives of community members. Justice Courts can hear civil cases involving amounts up to $3,000.00, except in landlord/tenant disputes where the monetary amount is unlimited. Cases may be filed in either the Civil or Small Claims Part of the court.

In addition to having jurisdiction over civil matters, Justice Courts have criminal jurisdiction over all misdemeanors, violations, and infractions. Town Justices also conduct arraignments and preliminary hearings involving felonies.

Town Justices have the authority to conduct marriage ceremonies and Justice Courts share jurisdiction with family court over certain family offenses such as disorderly conduct, harassment, menacing, reckless endangerment, and certain assaults.
